Video equipment missing

About $1,600 in video equipment was reported stolen from Allwine Hall on Monday March 21.

Robert Egan, associate professor and chairman of the biology department, said equipment owned by the biology department was discovered missing during the week prior to spring break. Egan said a portable Panasonic video player and camera were missing from his office at room 114A in Allwine Hall.

Egan said the camera was in a briefcase and all the missing items had "biology department" and "inventory control" markings on them.

Along with the camera and player, which were purchased by the biology department two years ago, Egan said video cassettes were also missing.

Egan said the only people with access to his office are himself, his secretary, faculty members and the custodial staff. Egan said his secretary contacted all faculty members to see if anyone borrowed the equipment. No one did and the incident was reported to Omaha Police.

Director of Campus Security Dave Castilow said the exact day and time the equipment was taken is unknown, adding that there were no signs of forced entry into Egan's office.

Castilow said Campus Security will investigate the incident, adding that sometimes stolen items turn up in pawn shops and are reported to Omaha Police.

April 1 deadline nears for some financial aid

By Marla Goldberg

Few days remain to submit financial aid forms for next fall according to Robert Pike, UNO financial aid director. The April 1 deadline applies to the NDSL, SEOG, State Incentive Grant and University Tuition/Waiver.

Applications for Pell Grants, College Work Study (CWS) and Guaranteed Student Loans (GSL) can be filed after April 1.

According to Pike, eligibility for grants requires a demonstration of need. For example, in a four-person household with one of the four in college, the family income must be $20,000 or less for a student to qualify for grants.

A Pell Grant ranges from $200 to $1,800 a year; the government determines the amount based upon tuition.

Another federally-funded grant is the Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant (SEOG) which provides up to $2,000 per year. State Student Incentive Grants (SSIG) are federally-funded awards matched with equal grants by the university.

A University Tuition/Waiver Grant differs from the other grants because it is not federally-funded. Eligible students have their tuition waived by the university. Most grants don't have to be repaid.

Financial assistance may also come from student loans. The National Direct Student Loan (NDSL) provides long-term loans at 5 percent interest. The GSL, another long-term loan, is offered to students through universities at 9 percent. Both have maximum ceilings on the amount borrowed.

Plus and Emergency Loans are similar to bank loans. The Plus Loan offers loans at 14 percent interest while the Emergency Loans are available at 9 percent. Students have nine months after leaving the university until repayment of the loan begins.

CWS programs provide part-time jobs for students based on need. Pike said that President Reagan's proposals for the 1984-85 academic year call for an increase in self-help programs.

Student enrollment status, U.S. citizenship, academic standing, repayment of previous loans, and a statement that educational funds will be used only for education determine eligibility for financial aid.

To tighten up requirements for eligibility, Congress has passed a bill, effective July 1, requiring men born after Jan. 1, 1960 to register for the draft before receiving financial aid. Women must sign a release stating they don't need to register. Pike said, since aid applications don't ask for the applicant's sex, this will identify names that could fit either sex.

Men born after Jan. 1, 1960, must register for the draft before receiving financial aid.

"The law will be difficult for students and institutions of higher learning," Pike said. A student could receive aid up to 90 days late because of post office delays in the delivery of a selective service letter, according to Pike.

Universities offer an alternative which permits a student to sign an affidavit stating that the letter verifying his draft registration will arrive within 120 days. If the aid applicant re-nigs on the affidavit, the university must assume responsibility for the aid granted. Pike said these effects are "costly and time-consuming for all parties."

Financial aid for UNO dropped $40,000 from $990,000 in 1981-82 to $950,000 in 1982-83. The 2 percent drop coincided with Reagan's social spending cuts. The National average budget cut in 1982-83 for colleges and universities is 14 percent. Pike said this year's aid level will remain about the same as last year.

Applications are available in the Financial Aid Office located on the first floor of the Eppley Building.

Does saying 'no' to a professor mean failing in class?

Administration seeks new policy on sexual harassment

By Kevin McAndrews

You're an attractive 23-year-old senior with only five credit hours left until graduation. The class you need is taught by only one professor. What do you do when that professor threatens to fail you unless you agree to sexual favors?

Present UNO policy requires sexual harassment complaints be filed with the chairperson of the department in which the complaint originates.

The problem with this, according to Richard Lombardo, chairperson of the Chancellor's Commission on the Status of Women, is that students could jeopardize their grades if the chairperson sympathized with the accused faculty member.

Lombardo said the accused faculty member might also be a friend of the chairperson and they might pass the matter off nonchalantly. He said that in some cases the chairperson may even be the accused offender.

"What recourse does a female have when she says 'no' to a faculty member?" asked Lombardo. "If she rebuffs him she stands the chance of getting a poor grade in the class."

Lombardo added that in some cases when incidents are brought to the attention of the chairperson, no one else hears about it because the chairperson does not want to make his department look bad by revealing the issue.

Because of these problems, Lombardo advocates drafting a proposed policy and procedures for dealing with sexual harassment. He called for the formation of a standing committee that would eventually evolve into a permanent hearing committee to deal with cases of sexual harassment.

Lombardo said the formation of an autonomous committee would be essential in dealing with cases.

He added that some students are afraid to bring forth a complaint for fear of publicity. Lombardo said current procedures force a student to go through a number of different people. Confidentiality is reduced when a complaint goes to several administrators.

Lombardo stressed the need for a committee comprised of representatives throughout the academic community. He said the committee should be made up demographically and not entirely of faculty members.

Lombardo criticized the recent proposal of the Faculty Senate to form its own committee on sexual harassment. He said the senate's proposal could result in a power struggle between the faculty and the administration. This is unnecessary due to the sensitivity of the subject, said Lombardo.

The elimination of the Ombudsman office strengthens his proposal to form a standing committee, according to Lombardo.

Cases of sexual harassment at UNO should decrease if hard-lined policy and procedures were adopted, said Lombardo.

The draft submitted by Lombardo and distributed by Richard Hoover, vice chancellor for Educational and Student Services, includes procedures to deal with serious infractions. A sexist remark in class by a professor might be dealt with in a less formidable way than an actual threat, said Lombardo.

Hoover said that many cases he has dealt with involve situations where the professor does not realize he has offended someone. Once the professor is confronted, the matter is usually cleared.

Lombardo's concerns about procedures include the size of the grievance committee. He said this should be kept at a minimum when cases are initially heard. Once a case is deemed serious, Lombardo said a nine-member committee including three administrators, three faculty members and three students should be formed.

Hoover said he distributed the draft to many different sources throughout the academic community in order to obtain maximum input about the policy and procedures.

"Once it is determined by the hearing panel that there is a strong case, the question is who makes the judgment from that point," said Hoover.

Hoover said the committee would hear all cases of alleged discrimination, including those of sexual harassment.

Hoover said he would meet with representatives of the Faculty Senate later this week to discuss the possibility of forming a committee. He said the differences between the faculty and the administration should not be hard to resolve.

Lombardo said the idea to form two committees, an autonomous committee and a Faculty Senate committee, would not work because a person could be found guilty by one committee and innocent by another. He said that an autonomous committee would be independent and would not be plagued with the bias that a senate committee might have.

LR 5 decision supported by regents

The University of Nebraska Board of Regents unanimously voted to ask the Unicameral not to advance a resolution turned down by a Legislative committee.

The regents voted, at their March 19 meeting, to support the committee's decision to postpone Legislative Resolution 5, which would return control of the university budget to the Legislature.

Sponsor of the resolution,

Omaha Sen. Karen Kilgarin, filed a motion to bring LR 5 to the floor of the Legislature. The motion was left hanging by a 26-13 vote. Kilgarin said that since the issue was left undecided, she may bring LR 5 to the floor again at a later date.

Kilgarin said the issue concerns accountability. "The bottom line is we must decide whether we'll remain hostages to what the university demands ... or whether to take a good, hard look at what the money is spent for," she said.

The regents said they are "convinced that the Legislature at present exerts considerable direction and control over the affairs of the University of Nebraska through appropriations and other legislative processes."

LR 5 is aimed at overturning a 1977 Nebraska Supreme Court decision, which, according to Kilgarin, gives the regents control over the university's purse strings. The university system accounts for about 20 percent of the entire state budget.

Absences no excuse for Student Senate

By Dawn Sumners

"This year's Student Senate has a better attendance record compared to last year's senate," said Guy Mockelman, speaker of the Student Senate.

Only four senators have been replaced this year, and none of them for having a bad attendance record, he said.

For the year's term, senators are allowed five absences: three unexcused and two excused.

During the summer, if a senator lives or works outside the Metro area they may be excused from all senate meetings.

Don Carlson, secretary for the senate, records all senator absences, and keeps Mockelman informed on each senator's standing. "Right now there is one senator I call before every meeting and tell him he's up to his limit," said Mockelman.

After a senator misses the limit, Mockelman gives them the opportunity to resign or the senate votes to retain him or not. "Usually the senate votes with the rules and removes them from the senate," he said.

"Only if the senator has extenuating circumstances does the senate vote against the rules to retain that senator," he said. For example, the senate had retained one member because he was seriously ill.

In the past, Mockelman said, senators have resigned rather than be voted out by the senate.

After a senator has been removed from the senate, a new senator is nominated by the Chief Administrative Officer, Renee Duke.

Mockelman said the Senate Rules Committee might form a committee to interview and make nominations to the senate concerning members.

"There would be problems with a committee also, but we are weighing the pluses and minuses of the idea," he said.

One of the problems a committee may encounter is attendance and scheduling interviews around the senators' class schedules.

Thought the senate has not voted any senators out of office this year, Mockelman said it may happen.

Senator Jim McMahon, representing the College of Graduate Studies, is close to the absenteeism limit.

The four senators who quit did so for a variety of reasons including financial problems, a new job, disenrollment, and not maintaining a 2.0 GPA.

The senators who resigned were Scott Peterson, Robert Atkinson, Anne Scott and William Hyde.

The only time Mockelman expects problems with attendance is during the summer. "Maybe they'll surprise me and show up for all the summer meetings," he said. The senate meets once a month during the summer and bi-weekly during the fall and spring semesters.

This year, however, Mockelman is taking initiative. It has not been done in the past, but this summer he plans to telephone senators about meetings. "You've got to put in effort, and then they'll put in the effort" to show up, he said.

Library campaign fights student vandals

By Patti Shields

Last November, library officials waged a public awareness campaign to help curb vandalism and mutilation of books and periodicals.

Although annual figures will not be computed until next August, library authorities are "cautiously optimistic" that the campaign has been effective, according to Carroll Varner, chairman of the University Library Technical Services department.

Varner said from September 1981 to August 1982 approximately 1500 journal pages had to be replaced, compared to 1100 pages replaced since last September.

"However," Varner said, "April tends to be the worst month for reports of damage because of final papers due," and he hopes student awareness will keep the figure down.

Damage reports range from missing photographs to complete articles that have been "razor-bladed out," Varner said.

Replacement of damaged material is expensive and time consuming. Varner said it takes a week to receive a photocopy, which costs the library a minimum of $3 per four-page article, $15-25 per issue, and $6 for rebinding if a volume has been damaged.

"It is an inconvenience for everyone," said Tom Tollman, associate professor of reference materials.

He said reference materials are also "exposed to mutilation" and replacement pages have to be glued back into the books.

"It is better to have repaired copies than no copies at all," Tollman said.

He explained that the system used two years ago, in which a student had to check out material through the reference and periodical desks, would not be effective in stopping the damage because of the volume of people that use each book and periodical.

"We generally do not know of the damage until a student points it out" and it is impossible to pinpoint when the mutilation was done, Tollman said.

Varner said the damage is hard to detect when glancing at a periodical because it has been cut out of the binding and "you must be looking for a specific article to realize that it is missing."

Varner said damage is not only caused by malicious students but also by people who feel a competitive pressure for grades. He said a student might take a journal article so fellow classmates will be at a disadvantage.

The public awareness campaign has been directed towards this type of individual, Varner said.

Signs have been posted throughout the library to warn students that vandalism is a criminal offense.

Varner encourages students to use the photocopy machines available in the library, and also suggests that instructors place photocopies of assigned articles in the reserve system at the circulation desk.

Space-age laser zaps Andropov

President Reagan has struck a raw nerve with Soviet leader Yuri Andropov.

During Reagan's March 23 speech, in which he discussed the nuclear arms build-up between the U.S. and Russia, the president spoke of an innovative defense policy.

Reagan proposed an anti-ballistic defense plan that would rely on space-age technology, by developing laser and particle-beam weapons designed to shoot down Soviet nuclear weapons before they can reach their designated targets.

Andropov retaliated with harsh words, describing the new plan as "insane," adding that the Soviets would never allow the proposal to succeed.

It is easy to understand Andropov's outrage. The Soviets are clearly ahead in the nuclear arms race, and have refused to discuss any reductions in arms.

The Soviets were assured supremacy in the arms race because of the nuclear freeze movement and the American public's growing awareness of a possible nuclear catastrophe.

But now the game has changed.

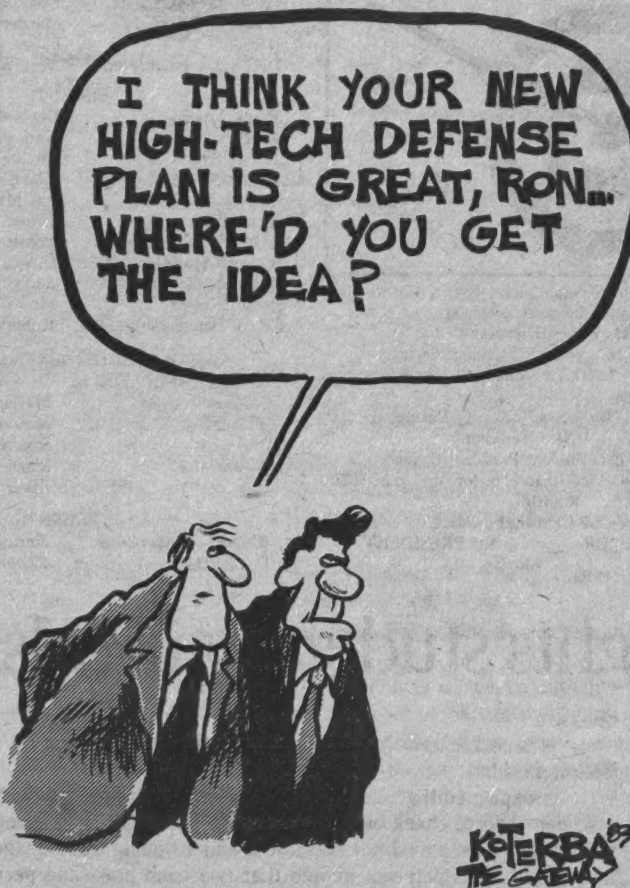

Reagan's plan will take advantage of American technology, something that the Soviets can't quite match.

It is our strong suit. And what better way to use our good old American ingenuity than by preventing nuclear attack, instead of fostering it.

Already industry in the Silicon Valley has developed projects that would shoot down Soviet cruise missiles, and pinpoint targets from space.

Technological breakthroughs have often been the turning points for countries in the past. Had Britain not developed effective radar, or the United States the atomic bomb during World War II, the world as we know it today might not exist. Germany was very close in developing both.

Hopefully, this new technological thrust will remain as Reagan envisions it: a defense system that would eliminate the threat of nuclear war.

Letters to the editor are welcome. Preference will be given to typed letters. They must be signed, but noms de plume can be used upon request. All letters should include proper identification, address, and telephone number. Letters critical of individuals must be signed by using the first and last name or initials and last name. All letters are subject to editing and available space. Letters do not necessarily reflect the views of the Gateway.

To the Editors:

This letter is in response to the March 9, 1983, Gateway editorial about "All School Parties". First of all, the "All School Party" Roger Hamer attended was NOT a UNO sponsored "All School Party." The party was sponsored by an off-campus business called Entertainment Now. Therefore, it really was not indicative of a typical UNO "All School Party," let alone a SPO party.

In the past two years, I have attended every "All School Party" that SPO has sponsored. There has never been, to my knowledge, a chair thrown through the air; minors allowed into the parties; anyone allowed into the establishment without paying towards closing time; and there has only been one small fight, which was broken-up by the security guards immediately.

SPO has not, in the last two years, been billed for any damage to the Carter Lake Warehouse due to an "All School Party" it sponsored. This alone speaks for itself.

SPO uses the following procedures to control their "All School Parties":

- Age IDs are required to be admitted.
- The box office is kept open until the event is over, no one is allowed in free.
- There are two students and a security guard at the entrance to check for tickets and/or stamped hands until the event is over.

There are approximately 15 UNO sponsored "All School Parties" a year, of which 3-4 are SPO sponsored. If 3-4 is considered many compared to the 15 sponsored each year, my many certainly is not the same as Roger's many. (sic)

We don't use student fee money to sponsor these events, they are self-sufficient. We make between $800-1,500 a party. This money is then used for other programming for the University Community, such as classical guitarist, Segundo Pastor, G. Gordon Liddy, Ballet Folklorico de Albuquerque Concert, Madrigal Dinner and the like. Maybe Roger would find these events more appealing to him.

The difference between the party Roger Hamer attended and those few parties SPO sponsors, is SPO has sat down and anticipated the possible problems, and developed procedures to eliminate these problems.

I'm sorry Roger Hamer that you had such a bad experience at the party you attended. As pointed out this was not a SPO "All School Party" or any other UNO organization's party as your article indicated.

In the future, I would suggest you contact an organization before you make accusations that are not factual.

I invite Roger Hamer to attend a SPO sponsored "All School Party," so he can get a truer picture of the situation.

Gayle L. Spencer
Student Director, SPO

Editors' note: The Gateway editorial did not say that the All School Party in question was an SPO sponsored event. The party was billed in a Gateway ad as an All School Party and gave no indication that it was sponsored by an off-campus business. Also, less than two years ago, eight cars were vandalized at a UNO-sponsored party at the Carter Lake Warehouse. Damages included broken windows, stolen car stereos and purses.

Recent cartoons concerning the Faith Christian-State of Nebraska controversy have disturbed me. These cartoons all had an obvious slant. None that I have noticed have been pro-Faith Christian. Why isn't the other point of view given some consideration? Even though UNO is an institution that prepares teachers, it is also an institution where difficult topics should be openly discussed.

The State of Nebraska has neither the right nor the duty to demand teacher certification in private schools. The state should retain this right in public schools since the taxpayer has delegated the overseeing of quality education to the government. The state can use teacher certification as a means to meet the quality educational goal. This, by no means, guarantees a quality teacher or a quality education.

The ultimate responsibility for the child's education rests with the parents. The parent must not only consider the quality of the education, but also must consider the social environment the child will be exposed to in his formative years.

A private or home education may be an attractive alternative to reports of drug abuse, delinquency, a growing dropout rate, and a growing indication that many high school seniors cannot read or write.

I'm sure the Faith Christian parents love their children and have the child's best interest at heart. To throw these parents in jail for that seems to be a miscarriage of the justice system in America and the ideals this country was founded on.

The Faith Christian school is breaking Nebraska law by remaining open against court order. When a person believes an injustice is being committed, the person should air his concern. If the school remained closed, the issue never would be resolved.

Every argument has two sides. Each side may have some very valid points. I believe the Gateway and other journalistic organizations should show more responsibility and view both sides of an issue, even though one side may be unpopular.

Work-study proposal

The Nebraska Legislature is considering a proposal that would expand work-study programs for students while attending state colleges and universities.

Legislative Bill 126 would result in the state paying 20 percent of the salaries of students working in private industries and 65 percent of the salaries for students working for educational or non-profit institutions.

The bill includes an $1,800 ceiling on the amount a student may receive annually. In addition, the bill protects regular employees by prohibiting students from replacing current employees.

Since the bill has a financial impact on the state budget, a separate appropriations bill accompanies LB 126.

LB 126A provides appropriation of $1,000 to establish rules and regulations for LB 126 during the 1983-84 year and is considered a delaying tactic, having no effect on real funding until 1984-85. During that year, $2.125 million will be allocated for student aid.

These figures are well below the $18 million in unmet educational funding arrived at by a special task force established to determine students' financial needs.

Sponsors of the LB 126 are Sens. Sam Cullan and Bernice Labedz of Omaha. Sen. Jerry Warner introduced LB 126 A.

Establishing credit

"Money and Credit" is the topic of Stephen Pollan's presentation Thursday at the UNO student center from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

A professor of business at Marymount Manhattan College, Pollan is also an attorney and co-author of The Consumer's Credit Handbook. Pollan's new book, How To Borrow Money, will be published next fall.

Pollan's lecture is part of the American Express College Weeks Activities, sponsored by SPO. Pollan will speak on establishing credit, maintaining a good credit rating, borrowing, budgeting and financial planning.

A graduate of the City College of New York and Brooklyn Law School, Pollan presently consults and teaches negotiating skills at major banks. He is also a consultant for a network television pilot on family economics, and for a cable television pilot on credit and borrowing.

He has served as president and chief executive officer of Royal Business Funds, an American Stock Exchange-listed investment company, and was a senior real estate consultant for the National Bank of North America.

Pollan's speech is free to UNO students.

Mav softball team hoping to improve on 0-4 record

The UNO softball team lost its first four games of the season at the American Legion National Collegiate Women's Softball Tournament at Bartlesville, Okla., last week.

On Friday UNO lost 5-1 to Kansas and 3-2 to Michigan State and on Thursday the Lady Mavs lost 4-0 to Oklahoma and 8-4 to East St. Louis.

Kansas' Lady Jayhawks scored four runs in the second inning on Friday to pull ahead of the Lady Mavs, 4-0. A home run by junior Brenda Danenhauer scored UNO's only run. Kansas had 10 hits compared to seven by UNO.

However, the Lady Mavs took a 1-0 lead early against Michigan State. But in the third inning, Michigan State scored two runs to pull ahead. In the last inning both teams scored one run, giving UNO a 3-2 loss. UNO shortstop Karol Ulmer had a double for the Lady Mavs.

On Thursday, Oklahoma scored four runs and held UNO scoreless. Oklahoma had 10 hits compared to only four by the Lady Mavs. UNO committed 11 errors and Oklahoma had only two.

UNO scored three first-inning runs and one point in the third inning to jump to a 4-0 lead against East St. Louis. But an outburst in the fourth and seventh innings gave East St. Louis eight runs, giving the Lady Mavs a 8-4 loss. UNO had 10 hits and East St. Louis had 11, however; the Lady Mavs committed five errors compared to none by East St. Louis.

Although Miner said the hitting got better as the tournament went on, she said the hitting as a group needs to be improved.

Two bright spots for the UNO hitters were Ulmer and Danenhauer. Ulmer hit .643 while Danenhauer hit .500. Ulmer also stole five bases.

Head softball coach Chris Miner said pitching was one weak spot for UNO. "It's a little too early to tell, but it looks like our pitching may get strong," said Miner.

Only one of three Lady Mav pitchers, Jenny Pullen, has college experience on the mound.

"Two pitchers are a little green; they just need to be seasoned a little," said Miner.

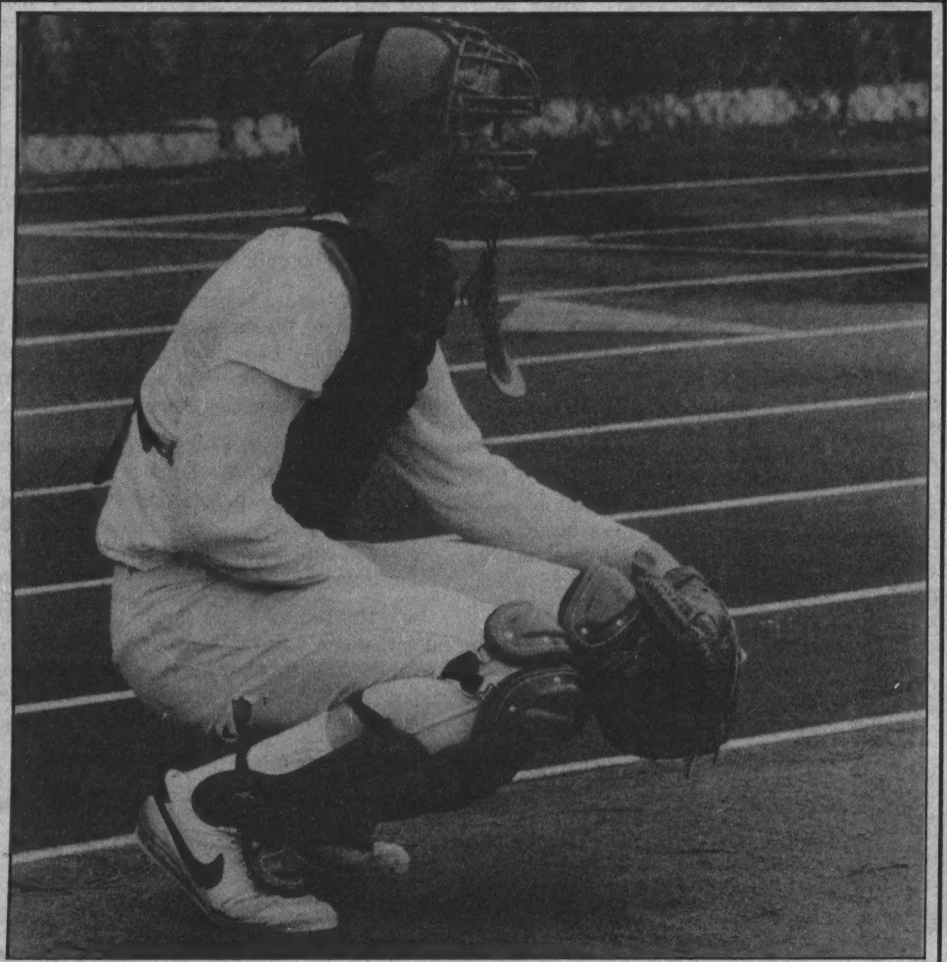

Senior Brenda Costello and sophomore Charyl Carl, UNO pitchers in their first year of college softball, will improve with time according to Miner.

The team also made some physical and mental errors. "That area will be cleaned up in no time at all," said Miner. "It was our first time out on dirt."

The UNO softball team will try to improve its record Wednesday when they play Augustana at Claussen-Westgate Field located at 82nd and Interstate 80.

"Augustana has a very good team," said Miner. "They have a lot of key people returning and we're going to have to play errorless ball if we hope to get past them this season."

On April 1-3 they will travel to Emporia, Kan., for the Emporia State Tournament.

Undaunted!

Bruce Anderson

UNO catcher Myron Bissen and the Maverick baseball team will try to add some wins to their 0-6 record this week. The team meets Augustana on Thursday and Bellevue on Saturday at the College World Series Park located at Interstate 80 and 84th Street. On Friday the team will travel to Sioux Falls, S.D., to play Augustana.

Over spring break the team dropped five games with Murray State, Ky., 7-6, 7-5, 11-7, 14-5 and 6-4. "They're a good ball club and I'm not discouraged one bit," said Coach Bob Gates. "The best part of our game was our hitting. We hit .317 as a team."

UNO also lost 9-6 to South East Missouri State on Thursday.

All-Academic Honors

Lady Mav basketball players Carmella Johnson and Lisa Linthacum have earned All-Academic honors for the 1982-83 season.

The conference sports information directors selected 11 players for the first women's North Central Conference All-Academic basketball team.

Johnson

Johnson, a 5-9 sophomore from Havelock, Iowa, has a 3.9 cumulative grade point average in medical technology. This season she averaged 8.7 points and 4.7 rebounds per game and shot 39.6 percent from the field and 75.4 percent from the line.

Linthacum, a 6-0 senior center, has a 3.51 cumulative G.P.A. in mathematics. She averaged 8.6 points and 6.6 rebounds per game and shot 45.8 percent from the field and 60 percent from the line.

Last year Linthacum was the top scorer and rebounder for UNO and was named to the 1981-82 NCC all-tourney team.
